Opening of New Fairfield Farms Dairy on Railroad Street Is Formally Announced.

Formal announcement is made today of the opening of the Gettysburg milk receiving station of the Fairfield Farms Dairy, Incorporated, located in a new building built especially for the purpose on Railroad street, between Carlisle and Washington streets.

The building is of brick and cement construction and was erected under the supervision of Luther Sachs, general contractor, and the Peters Cement Products company.

Purchasing the milk of Adams county farmers for delivery to consumers in Baltimore is the work of the station here.

The company is owned by Charles R. Bowman and the main offices of the firm are in Baltimore located at 545 North Exeter street, although Mr. Bowman has been a frequent visitor to Gettysburg and is well known throughout Adams county. He is a comparatively young man. The local station has been doing business since it was completed Monday, August 8.

"The Fairfield Farms Dairy is a growing concern, which has been doing business a number of years in Baltimore," Mr. Bowman told a Times reporter. "We started several years ago to purchase milk through cooling stations placed conveniently in the producing sections. The first consideration was to get hold of the milk as near its source as possible, to cool it below 40° F. and to keep it cold until time of delivery. There are advantages and disadvantages of this method as far as the producer is concerned, but the advantages have evidently outweighed the drawbacks, for we do not know of a section that had shipped to the city and to the stations for any length of time that wanted to go back to the individual city shipments. The keeping down of the growth in bacteria has meant more to the health of the city than any single improvement in the milk supply in a generation and its effect is most noticeable in the health of infants. The highest death rate in children from intestinal disorders does not occur in the hottest weather but when the bacteria in milk for infant (Continued on Fifth Page)

GUN WAVER IS IN COUNTY JAIL

Evers Knipple, who was arrested Tuesday evening by state troopers after he is alleged to have chased his wife and their children from their home at Mummaburg at the point of a gun and to have also pointed a gun at Robert Sell, was remanded to the Adams county jail Thursday evening by Justice J. U. Appler in default of $500 bail. The charge against Knipple was wantonly pointing firearms.

Mrs. Knipple and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sell, neighbors of the Knipples, were the only witnesses called.

BEGINS FIFTIETH YEAR AS TEACHER

Wilson Hummelbaugh, of Fountain Dale, Began Teaching in Fall of 1877.

Next Monday, Wilson Hummelbaugh, 68, of Fountain Dale, will enter upon his fiftieth year as teacher in the Adams county public schools, says the York Springs Comet, which adds:

"He entered the teaching profession in the fall of 1877, when but eighteen years of age, and his first school was the Pike, in Huntingdon township. How many Adams county men can boast of a greater accomplishment than the service rendered over this period of half a century in giving instruction and advice to the boys and girls that were placed under his care? Mr. Hummelbaugh has seen his pupils grow up and marry, and many are now grandparents of children of school age. The example of his exemplary life, and the instruction and advice given to the procession of pupils cannot be measured in dollars and cents. What a tremendous influence for good is exerted by the patient teachers, many who labor faithfully with their charges for less wages than are paid to a garage mechanic.

"Mr. Hummelbaugh's first term was for five months and he received $25 per month, just one-fourth of what he has been receiving for the past several years. He has kept in touch with modern methods of teaching and many of his pupils have graduated from the public schools and gone through higher institutions of learning. A list of the people who received instruction from him during the past 49 years and their careers would be most interesting and fascinating reading."

News and Comment by THE EDITOR

There has just come to the desk of the editor a very attractively printed and illustrated booklet of 48 pages, published at an expense of many thousands of dollars of public funds by the department of highways at Harrisburg and containing the names on the cover of Governor John S. Fisher and Secretary of Highways James Lyall Stuart, as its sponsors.

It has to do with Pennsylvania as a historical, scenic and fine highway center and is intended, we are informed, for general distribution throughout the nation to attract tourists of the Keystone state.

It contains signed articles by many state officials including the governor, on "The Keystone of Highway Systems;" the secretary of highways, on "Pennsylvania's highway program;" Wilson C. Price, superintendent, on "The Pennsylvania Highway Patrol;" articles on "Pittsburgh, the steel city, warmly welcomes tourists;" and "Diversity of Pennsylvania Scenery appeals to tourists;" and "Picturesque Pennsylvania;" and a dozen and one other subjects of similar nature.

There are more than 120 beautiful illustrations, numerous historic landmarks, such as the Molly Pitcher memorial at Carlisle, Washington's profile on a native rock at Sayre Park, Bethlehem; the original Mason-Dixon line marker at Pen Mar; old town clock at top of Gap Hill; Philadelphia City Hall; but in Washington's camp at Valley Forge; William Penn spring, at Gorge, Lancaster county; residence of Governor John S. Fisher, Indiana; Shawkill Falls, in Pike county; view of Harrisburg and Capitol; Lafayette's headquarters; a panoramic view of Valley Forge; a view of Centre Square at York, and numerous other scenes.

It is a fine booklet, but—Gettysburg seems to have been studiously overlooked by the governor and Mr. Stuart.

State Librarian Frederick A. Godcharles quite graciously gives Gettysburg three lines of space at the end of his article on "Historic Pennsylvania."

In a chronological arrangement by counties of "landmarks of historic interest," Gettysburg gets recognition to the extent of five lines. (Athens, in Bradford county, gets six lines; Hathboro, in Bucks county, gets eight lines, Harrisburg, eleven, etc.)

In the matter of illustrations, the nearest Gettysburg comes to getting into a caption is under a view of the highway at "Twin Bridges on Route 24, between Gettysburg and Harrisburg" and again under a view of a "Bridge on Route 51, between Gettysburg and Waynesboro."

Under the general heading of "traveling directions" to tourists, the booklet, in chronological order, gives three lines to the Lincoln Highway from Pittsburgh to New York, with no mention of Gettysburg, and links up with this three-line item seven lines detailing alternate routes which turn the tourist off the Lincoln Highway before reaching Gettysburg!

Yes, there is still another reference to Gettysburg. On page six there is a photographic reproduction of the orange and blue markers which name each town at the entrance along state highways. In large letters is the word: "Chambersburg." Beneath, somewhat smaller, it tells of Chambersburg being "named in honor of Col. Benjamin Chambers, Founded 1743." At the top of the illustration you can read, by straining the eyes a bit, this designation of distance: "Gettysburg—25."

Pennsylvania ought to be just as much interested in telling the world "what they did here" and what we now have here in the way of a great national park as are the people of Gettysburg, who, we feel certain, take their trusteeship of the Gettysburg battlegrounds seriously. But this booklet is a striking illustration that official Harrisburg attaches more historic significance to the Molly Pitcher statue at Carlisle, and Governor Fisher's residence in Indiana, than to Gettysburg. Maybe we are wrong in our belief that Gettysburg is by far the greatest point of historical interest in the Keystone state to the rank and file of people from this state and all other states in the union. At any rate, the fact that nearly a million tourists stop here every year at last lends some weight to our contention. We are going to

Kiddies Romp with Lions In Making Merry Thursday At Marsh Creek Heights

When all is said and done, 1100 kiddies of Gettysburg had a big day of it as guests of the Lions' club, and that is sufficient.

With only a short time until school bells will be calling the youngsters of this community back to their books, more than a thousand boys and girls from Gettysburg and the surrounding communities, including the little orphans at the Paradise protectorate, had a gala time at Marsh Creek Heights Thursday afternoon with races, games, boating and swimming, not to mention the large quantity of ice cream, pop and pretzels which they managed to stow away.

A fleet of the largest trucks of Gettysburg hurried the boys and girls to the park shortly after one o'clock and after that there was plenty of amusement provided to keep them busy until it was time for the return trip.

Throughout the entire afternoon there was not one accident or mishap reported—not even a "tummy ache" from eating too much, and with the Gettysburg Boys' band on the grounds to play for their amusement it can honestly be said "a good time was had by all."

Sergeant Merrifield and Trooper Verbecken, of the local detachment of state troopers, kept an eye on the ice cream to be sure that no one was hurt in the rush for the "eats."

The committee in charge of arrangements was Lloyd Keefeaver, C. C. "Junie" Bream, C. C. Culp and Ivan Naugle. They were assisted by more than 100 other persons, including a large number of women—wives of the members of the Lions' club.

Playground to Close Wednesday, Handiwork of Children Will be Placed on Exhibition this Week

The playground, which has been conducted under the auspices of the Gettysburg school board during the last summer, will be closed on Wednesday, August 31, C. C. "Junie" Bream, director, announced today.

The equipment, erected for the amusement of the kiddies, will be stored away, beginning Monday, but supervised play will continue until Wednesday.

Miss Lulu Moore Hester, who has been in charge of the basket weaving and games for the younger children, has asked that all of the basket work done by the children be brought to the playground not later than Saturday noon in order that it can be put on display in the show windows of the Gettysburg Times office. The baskets will be on display until Wednesday when they will be returned to their owners.

The equipment has been added to this year and it is hoped that it will be increased next year until the local recreation center is one of the best supervised play will continue until Wednesday.

Director Bream stated today that the attendance this year has been smaller than in other years, attributing it to the fact that the wet spell earlier in the year, and the recent cool weather, had kept the children at home.

Georgia Flyer is Progressing On 4,600 Mile Trip to Brazil

Sighted By Steamer 300 Miles At Sea Off Bahamas, He Is Holding To Charted Course; Miracle If He Reaches Objective Tomorrow, Is Belief.

Brunswick, Georgia, Aug. 26.—(AP)—A wireless report from a steamer of Nassau through St. Petersburg, that Paul Redfern's plane, the Port of Brunswick, was seen 300 miles east of the Bahamas yesterday, indicated that the Georgia aviator was holding to the course which he expected to follow when he hopped off from here yesterday noon.

Taking off from Glynn Isle Beach, Redfern's course lay straight over the sea to the southward. This course swung him east of the Bahamas and then overlaid for the first time in passing the southwestern corner of Porto Rico.

From there Redfern planned to jump across the Caribbean sea and then over continental land for the first time in South America. This would be his path this morning if all went well with him and he maintained his schedule.

Naval men stated that if Redfern reached his objective it would be nothing short of a miracle. They estimate he would miss objective at Rio de Janeiro by about 150 miles, as they did not believe his gasoline supply would last more than 57 hours while with favorable conditions it would take 62 hours to reach his goal.

They believe that when he reaches the northeastern coast of Brazil he will turn east to Per nambuco.

Asheville-Quebec Run Is Completed Few Hours Behind

Battles, blazing the trail over the Appalachian Scenic highway, the route to be followed by the motorcade during September, arrived at Quebec about four and a half hours late, Henry M. Scharf was informed by Mr. Harris late yesterday.

The trail blazers, who left Asheville, North Carolina, at 12:01 a. m. Monday morning and arrived in Gettysburg shortly before 3 o'clock that same afternoon, were due to arrive in Quebec at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. They got there at 6:25 o'clock.

Mr. Harris carried with him letters of greeting from governors of several states, and highway officials, to the minister of roads and other prominent Canadian officials.

On their trip through Pennsylvania, the Harris party was accompanied by several members of the state motor patrol who escorted them to the New York state line.

FEWER PEACHES, MORE MONEY IN CROP BEING SOLD

Adams County's Output On Way To Consumers In The City Markets.

Adams county peaches have begun their journey to the eastern markets, and growers in this section are banking on bigger financial returns from their fruit this year than received the last several seasons. The shortage of good peaches in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Virginia is looked upon as being a big factor in bringing good prices for the local crop.

Several of the pecking houses began work this week and already several carloads have been shipped eastward, with considerable more to follow during the next two months. Elbertas and Hales came into bearing this week in some sections, but several orchardists complained that the current cool weather is delaying the ripening of a large portion of their crop. Picking of the very early varieties has been going on for over a week and steady employment will be given the several hundred pickers until apples come in.

May Bring $4 A Bushel
A large number of growers complain that the crop this year is quite small while others maintain that it is an 80 per cent crop, but, either way, the growers stand to profit from the crop.

A. E. Rice, of the Rice Produce company, Biglerville, recently predicted that the retail prices will run as high as $4 a bushel in many sections of the country and in some places growers are receiving slightly more than this amount.

The fruit now moving to the markets is said to be in excellent condition and, packed according to the governmental grading, insures the buyer against receiving a poor quality of fruit.

The state bureau of markets said that consumers will find the "U. S. No. 1" grade generally satisfactory as such fruit must be sound, clean, well formed and mature, but not overripe. If buyers want to be sure of securing fruit of bright color for the variety, they should endeavor to purchase the "U. S. Fancy" grade. In either case, however, consumers can be assured that the fruit will be the same grade from the top to the bottom of the container, the bureau says.

The crop is estimated at 932,000 bushels, which is only about one-third normal, and about 1,600,000 less than last year's heavy crop. The average crop of the past five years has been 1,656,000 bushels.

The low crop is laid to the inclement weather during the blossom season. High winds destroyed the fruit-growing part of the flowers and the late spring delayed many orchards. However, the quality of the fruit apparently was not affected.

During the peach marketing season, most of the carlot shipments from Franklin, Adams, Cumberland, York and Berks counties will be packed according to the new standard peach grades, adopted July 1, and inspected by agents of the State Department of Agriculture.

$100 REWARD FOR HIT-RUN DRIVERS

Motor Federation Will Pay For Each Person Found Guilty of Carelessness.

A $100 reward for the arrest and conviction of every hit-and-run driver in the state will be paid by the Pennsylvania Motor Federation with which the Gettysburg motor club of Adams county is affiliated.

Richard C. Haldeman, president of the Federation, made the offer. In announcing the reward, Haldeman said, "He who hits and runs away will live to hit another day"—therefore it is urgent that every possible step be taken to punish the carelessly criminal or criminally careless motor vehicle operator who hits and runs."

For the last several months the Federation has co-operated with the Bureau of Motor Vehicles in a joint campaign against the motorist who speeds away after an accident. The state highway patrol and police of the various municipalities in the state have been requested to join in the campaign to put an end to the wanton killing and injuring of pedestrians and motorists but despite their efforts to this end, there has been little abatement in this class of collisions.

FARMHOUSE FIRE LOSS ABOUT $6000

Flames Start in Wash House and Spread Despite Efforts of Bucket Brigade.

The farmhouse of John Gibney, located two and half miles south of New Kingston, which was built long before the Civil War, was destroyed by fire Thursday.

Two side walls are all that remain of the old ten-room dwelling which was partially burned fourteen years ago. The house was built of limestone.

The house, which stands on what is known as the old Miller farm, is located several hundred feet from the Cumberland Valley railroad station. Mrs. Gibney, at home with two children, when the fire was discovered, suffered burns about the face while removing furniture from the first floor.

Starts in Washhouse
Mrs. Gibney was burning rubbish in a large open fireplace in a frame washhouse which adjoined the farmhouse. While attending the baby in the front room of the house, a son, John, who had been working in the barn, rushed in and said the roof of the washhouse was afire. The family hurriedly formed a bucket brigade, but the blaze engulfed the frame annex and spread to rafters on the main building.

Mr. Gibney, working in a nearby field, rushed to the home and called the Washington fire company, of Mechanicsburg, when efforts to reach the hose company at New Kingston proved futile. By the time the fire company arrived the entire inside of the house was afire.

Firemen, who were compelled to use chemicals, turned their attention to the barn and sheds as the fire had gained such headway in the house that efforts to check it were useless. The fire burned from the third story to the cellar.

Some of the furniture on the first floor was saved by members of the family and the aid of a crowd of persons who came to the fire. The farm is now owned by James Gibney, the tenant's father, who estimates the loss at approximately $6000.

The descendants of these two families began to assemble at 10 o'clock. About 130 were present. A luncheon was served at noon in the grove. The exercises were held in the old historic "Kirk" and were opened with reading of scripture, prayer, and singing, "America." The program included:

Greeting by Nancy Weaver, written by Robert Fidler; response by Mr. Chestnut, Hyattsville, Maryland; reading of minutes by the secretary; collection, part of which was given to the old church; singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds"; address by the president, William A. McIlhenney; a reading by Mrs. William Boyer, entitled, "Heritage"; musical number, written by Miss Ruth McIlhenney and rendered by Miss Gail Bell and Miss Ruth McIlhenney with Miss Frances Bell at the piano; a piano solo by Miss Nolt; short addresses by the following: Mrs. Gardner, Harper Main, Ray McIlhenney, James Gordon, Mrs. Florence Knox, Germantown, and Congressman Menges, York. In his address, he extended an invitation to members of the clan to be present at the pageant given to celebrate the meeting of the colonial congress in York, September 30, 1777, to June 27, 1778.

The old officers were re-elected. The program committee comprised Mrs. Walker Woods, Jr., Miss Margaret McIlhenney and Mrs. Margaret Scott. It was again decided to hold the re-union next year the last Thursday in August. The exercises closed with the benediction. After adjournment, the young people had games in the grove. In the evening the young people of the clan held a corn bake at the home of Hugh McIlhenney, Harrisburg road.

Members of these two families were present from Gettysburg, Collingswood, New Jersey, Hyattsville, Maryland, Waynesboro, Tacony, Aspers, Fairfield, Biglerville, Lancaster, Bruceton, Arendtsville, Moon, Coatesville, Wilmington, Delaware, Bryn Mawr, Shippensburg, Ontario, Canada, Wenonah, New Jersey, Philadelphia, York, Cleveland, Ohio, Germantown.

HOODED MAN IS SHOT TO DEATH

Planter Kills One When Group In Robes Descends Upon His Home.

Danville, Va., Aug. 26.—Two separate inquiries were being made into the shooting Wednesday night of J. C. Sparrow, 42, Danville restaurant owner, who was killed by Charles W. Wilson, 60, tobacco planter, at the latter's home, Oak Hill.

Coroner J. E. Taylor was seeking witnesses and Commonwealth's Attorney P. J. Hundley was obtaining evidence, which he refused to discuss. The outstanding feature was Taylor's statement that a Klan membership card had been found in Sparrow's pocket.

According to Wilson, six men, wearing long white robes and high peaked caps covering their faces, tried to enter his dwelling when he shot. Wilson has a good reputation. He is, however, poor and now that he is in jail has no one to "save" the 42,000 hills of tobacco he has raised this year.

Wilson's story, told in the city jail, is that he was aroused at 11 o'clock by the hooded men, who demanded admittance. He says they refused to identify themselves. Wilson got his gun and says he warned them he was going to shoot through the window. They then went to the back of the house. One of them, he says, fired a pistol at him at such close range that the powder burnt him.

Here and There News and Comment by THE EDITOR

continue to cling to that belief.

The object of this review of the new Pennsylvania booklet, from the Gettysburg point of view, is not as much in criticism of those who sponsored it as it is to further impress, we hope, the citizens of this community that Gettysburg must continue to keep itself before the eyes of the nation through its own initiative, enterprise and resources. Certainly, we can't expect much help from Harrisburg, and little more from Washington.

The compositor of the type matter in the new "Pennsylvania Highways" booklet evidently was singing of the southland in his mind while at work. He refers to it as the "Mason-DIXIE Line."

"M. H. J.," in his column, "Call It A Day," seems to have found some little known historical fact of interest locally. He says:

"Two facts of importance, historically, came to the attention of this column Sunday, while it was talking to Mr. D. H. Patterson, of McConnellsburg.

"While Gettysburg is generally supposed to have been the scene of the first battle of the Civil War North of the Mason-Dixon line, the first encounter between troops of the North and South began in front of the Fulton House at McConnellsburg the morning of June 30, 1863, and ended fifteen minutes later when Southern cavalymen disappeared toward Mercersburg. A few minutes from the Fulton House is a wooden signboard marking the graves of T. A. Shelton, of North Carolina, and W. B. Moore, of Virginia, Confederate soldiers. These are the only Confederate graves north of the Mason-Dixon line.

"When he burned Chambersburg in 1864 General McCausland of the Confederate Army, dashed westwardly over the Bedford pike, now the Lincoln Highway. He and his force of cavalymen stayed over night in McConnellsburg. General McCausland and his chief aid, General Bradley T. Johnson, slept in the Fulton House. One of these gentlemen left behind him a single brass spur, which you may see if you ask the young woman at the desk in the Fulton House."

And this editorial from the editorial column of the Harrisburg Telegraph of Thursday evening also has its local, as well as general interest:

Helping Poor Students
"Judge Gary, willing large sums to colleges, stipulates that the income shall be used to help needy students through school. In this he differs sharply with young John D. Rockefeller, who recently expressed the belief that no such help should be extended, his notion being that there are already too many boys in college. But by the same token there are many lads not in college who ought to be there, and who would be if the financial way were opened.

"Doctor Hanson president of Gettysburg, is authority for the statement that many worthy students get along toward the last half of their senior year before they find themselves so devoid of means they must either be financed as Judge Gary's will provides or drop out with their goals in sight and their courses well

"We have need of the brains of the lads who work their way through school. In most cases they go farther in after life and are better citizens than many of those who go to college simply because their parents have the means and 'it is the thing to do.'"
"Judge Gary knew from experience the trials of the lad of limited means. He has put the money he bequeathed to the colleges to a most useful purpose."

"Fly Over The BATTLEFIELD"

Announcement!

The Gettysburg Airport, located at Oak Ridge will consist of sixty acres of the Forney Farm. Extensive work has progressed during the past ten days in the creation of an airdrome which will be an asset to Gettysburg and the Battlefield Reservation.

The office and comfort station now being constructed are at the intersection of Reynolds, Buford and Wadsworth Avenues, one mile from Center Square by way of Chambersburg Street and the Lincoln Highway.

The Airport will be opened tomorrow, August 27th, with an air-circus, a feature of which will be parachute jumps Saturday and Sunday afternoons. The passenger carrying planes of the Gettysburg Flying Service will take passengers aloft beginning Saturday morning, weather permitting, but will not participate in the stunt flying. Out of the Past Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO
Local Miscellany.—The new St. James church will be ready for dedication on September 15.

The Smithsonian Institute of Washington has just donated to Gettysburg college an extremely valuable collection of thousands of geological and biological specimens for classroom use. To Hon. Daniel F. Lafean, of York, member of Congress from this district, a very large measure of credit is due for the securing of this complete collection of rare specimens for the college.

The Williams Grove picnic is on this week. Quite a number of cottagers are taking in the battlefield as a side trip.

New Prize for College.—Luther A. Brewer, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, a member of '83, Gettysburg college, has provided for a prize of $25 for excellence in Greek to be awarded to a student of the college. Mr. Brewer is a publisher, one of the leading public men of Iowa. He was a member of the committee which notified President Taft of his nomination by the Chicago convention.

Building Lots Sold.—Martin Winter has sold building lots as follows:

75 feet on Broadway to Dr. Wayne Keet.
50 feet additional on Broadway to S. S. Neely, Esq.
93 feet on Lincoln avenue to John D. Keith, Esq.
40 feet on East Middle street to Mrs. William H. Tipton.

Fifty Years Ago.—Sergeant Lashell, of this place, took with him on Friday morning last 28 hale and hearty young men, recruited here for the Anderson troop. They are now at Carlisle, where they will remain for a week or two until the organization is complete.

The following are the names of the young men: James S. Welty, Charles Weaver, John M. Willard, William H. Pierce, Nicholas F. Ziegler, Benish C. Snyder, John K. Marshall, Andrew E. Lowe, Thomas W. Gitt, George W. Kinter, David Shaeffer, John H. Martin, William H. Small, David Tawney, George Shields, Samuel Wampler, Joseph Meals, Jacob Kitzmiller, Baltzer S. Benner, William G. Sheffer, John E. Benner, John W. Wierman, William F. Bowers, George W. Hildebrand, Howard Becker, Charles M. Brough, William M. Barnitz, James Swisher.

Our townsman, John Wilson, private in Captain Chritzman's company, who was wounded at Fair Oaks, died at Clifton hospital, Washington, a few days ago. He was recovering from his wounds, but took diphtheria and died therefrom. His age was about 26 years.

The Draft for Adams County.—The marshal of the eastern district of this state appointed John Picking, Esq., of East Berlin, for the county of Adams, to superintend the enrollment of persons subject to militia duty. Jacob Aughinbaugh was appointed subordinate to make assessment for Gettysburg.

We are told that Col. R. C. Swope, of Fairfield, has been appointed commissioner to superintend the draft and Dr. Charles Horner, of this place, examining surgeon. It is said that the number of men required by this county will be about 1,200.

McIlhenny-King Reunion.—The fourth annual reunion of the McIlhenny and King families was held at the Great Conewago Presbyterian church, Hunterstown, August 24. This gathering is composed of two of the oldest families in the Tyrone-Straban section of the county.

The descendants of the two families began to assemble at the old "Kirk" about 9 a. m., about one hundred being present.

The lecture room of the church was used as a dining hall. After luncheon the exercises were held in the historic old "Kirk", which was built in 1787.

The meeting was called to order by William A. McIlhenny, of Gettysburg. Officers elected were as follows: President, William A. McIlhenny; secretary, Miss Annie H. Major; treasurer, Hugh McIlhenny, all of Gettysburg.

College Buildings for Anniversary.—The Pennsylvania Gettysburg Battlefield Commission having in charge the arrangements for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, July 1-4, 1913, are negotiating with the authorities of Gettysburg college for the use of the college buildings to house and entertain the president of the United States, his cabinet, the foreign ambassadors to the celebration, the diplomatic corps and other distinguished guests during their stay here.

Just Folks

FOLLY

Oh! I may bar the window panes,
And lock the doors so stout,
And make my vows to guard my house
So thieves must stay without.
And I may give it constant care
To keep it safe within;
But spite o' me and lock and key
Dame Folly will creep in.

And I may read the deepest books
To learn what wise men do;
Hear parsons preach, and sages teach,
And take their counsel, too;
And I may vow my house shall shine
Like newly polished tin,
But somehow still against my will
Dame Folly dances in.

Oh! 'tis not lack of wisdom here
Nor lack of prayers for good
That makes my plight, nor lack of might
When all is understood.
Though safe I keep my trinkets cheap
And guard each trivial pin,
In spite o' me and lock and key Dame Folly waltzes in.

And so it is with all of us,
Save but the very few—
We have and dream and plan and scheme
The noblest deeds to do,
With houses barred, we stand on guard
Against the troops of sin,
But 'spite of all—locked gate and wall—
Dame Folly dances in.

Now, let me see, for a minute or three. What was the little rabbit doing in the last story? Oh, yes, now I recall. He was visiting the Billy Goat Ferryman at the old wharf on the River Shippi. Of course he was, and that nice old sailor goat was telling him all about goats and their habits. Well, I guess by this time the little bunny has learned something. Your Uncle Dave when a boy used to sit for hours at a time listening to the yarns that an old sailor used to spin. Sailors know how to tell stories, well, I'll say so. But that's not going on with this story, is it, my little Jack Rabbit Fans. So, here goes old "Remmy," my faithful typewriter, clickety click.

"Do you know, little bunny, that in a far-away country named France flocks of goats are led through the streets of small towns and milked before the doors of those poor customers who wish to be supplied with fresh milk?"

"How interesting," laughed the little rabbit.

"Mighty convenient," laughed the old Billy Goat. "The herd of goats trots along the street, and on hearing the tinkle of the bells on their collars, the customers come to their doors with pails to be filled with fresh milk. The goats don't mind in the least the noise and bustle in the streets. Just imagine how frightened would be a flock of sheep. Besides giving milk, the goat furnishes its fleece to make certain kinds of rough cloth. From the fleece of the Cashmere and Angora goats, who live in a continent called Asia, beautiful garments are made. Yes, sir, these goats have a very fine, beautiful fleece. But, now, let me tell you a story. Once upon a time there lived a poor family in a little half-tumbled down house on the outskirts of a small town. The father had gone away to find work in a large city, and the two older children and their mother found it difficult to earn money enough to buy even the plainest kind of food. Had it not been for their pet Nanny Goat, who daily supplied them with milk, I hardly know how they would have fared. The poor mother, whose little baby took up much of her time, did her best to earn a few pennies by taking in washing. But one day the poor mother became ill with a fever and could no longer nurse her little baby.

"What shall I do?" she cried to her two older children. "Baby must have milk. Who will nurse my little one now that I am too ill to feed it?"

"Now, the baby was too young to be fed with a spoon, and in the little settlement there was no baby's milk bottle to be had.

"What shall I do?" sighed the poor mother, lying there so ill with the fever.

"I know what to do," cried the oldest boy. "I'm sure Nanny will nurse the baby. Nanny is so gentle," and picking up the baby, he carried it out to where Nanny was lying under a shady tree.

"Nanny Goat, Nanny Goat, please be a mother And nurse like a baby our poor little brother."

begged the boy. Then carefully placing the baby close to the gentle

Nanny Goat, he waited while she willingly fed the little hungry one, and for many days, and until the poor woman was again able to be about, whenever the baby cried, the motherly Nanny Goat would come running and bleating to the door of the tumble-down house to nurse the little one. And this is a true story," concluded the old Billy Goat Ferryman, turning to the little rabbit. "Goats are mighty useful animals, although many people who have learned nothing about them, think otherwise."

Bishops Object To Women's Field Day

Berlin (AP)—Women athletes of Bavaria had a hard time arranging their annual field day.

At first the Bavarian bishops interfered, declaring it was shameful for Christian women to show their legs before a mob of gaping males. Then Margaret Miller, a well-known Catholic writer, attacked the management, saying it was entirely under the domination of men.

Despite these protests the Bavarian State Athletic federation stuck to its program, and the field day came off at Neuburg on the Danube as originally arranged.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE JOY OF LIFE

IF WE hunt for joy we are not very apt to find it. Hunted things lose their glow and beauty all too soon after finding. The lasting joy is that which comes spontaneously after having given joy to someone else.

The joy of work comes from the work itself, not in the final outcome of work. I often think of that statement of Tagore that the road should be a part of the destination itself.

Joy must be felt as it germinates. It doesn't come, full born, out of a clear sky. Joy must always be earned. In the same way that happiness must be earned.

The joy of life comes about in a number of ways. One way is to be glad for all we have.

Many times after the day is done and I lie for a few minutes before the heaviness of sleep bears me into unconsciousness, I think over the work of the day and measure the gains and losses. But just the minute that I think of those things which I have not I skip quickly to those blessings which I have—and how they outweigh those that are not mine!

If you have health you have what many of the most favored of earth have not. If you have hope and a philosophy of life, you have what the richest could not buy at any price.

Too many of us think of life as a problem. Life is not a problem. It's a task, a little journey, a divine adventure—an errand.

Garcia Rowan delivered his message without asking any question as to why he should deliver it.

I cannot say why so much of life is a disappointment. I can only say that much of life isn't a disappointment at all!

DUNLOP

FOR 39 YEARS Dunlop has been building the world's supreme tire. Dunlops wear longer because Dunlop knows how to build better at each vital point.

Take the hidden carcass beneath the tread. Dunlop owns its own cotton mills for no other purpose than to spin the best long-fibre cotton into the famous cable-twist cord that goes into this carcass.

The extra strength in these cords means an added factor of safety against constant load and pounding of roads—longer life and greater mileage.

The extra "stretch" enables the carcass to give under severe blows, and to come back into its original position without internal injury.

The Dunlop tread—the toughest rubber development known—wears slowly and smoothly, making sure that you get out of your Dunlops, all the extra mileage that added care and longer experience have built into them. We recommend that you put Dunlops on your car.

FOUNDERS OF THE PNEUMATIC TIRE INDUSTRY

feeding is highest. This was the real reason for the beginning of our cooling stations.

"A second consideration was that these stations made it possible to get milk from sections not adjacent to a railroad and too far from Baltimore for a direct haul. We feel that the time consumed in gathering milk and in the hauling makes it impossible to get milk at its best for a greater distance than 25 miles from the city. Cooling the milk to 40°F. or less and hauling it in insulated, glass-lined tanks have very much improved and enlarged our supply.

"Another consideration is the convenience and help afforded the producer himself. He is relieved of all losses and responsibilities that were formerly carried after the milk had left his hands. There were losses by spilled milk, dented and lost cans, return freight on unaccepted milk, freight on unfilled cans. Here we have no trains to meet at a definite time (helps the producer to sleep more soundly) and saves one-half the cooling. There are many other advantages.

"A milk market provided a more stable outlet for farm crops, through the milk cow, than any other market. There is a monthly return as in few other outlets and dairying enables the owner to keep up the fertility of the farm better and cheaper than in any other way. A producer can justly feel that he is contributing to the health and betterment of folks when he is producing the high quality of milk he would want his own children to have were he in the city. He is a real producer and this is always more worthwhile and satisfying than being a cog in the handling operations, no matter how worth-while these may seem. Everyone likes to feel that he is helping in a constructive way, and this a good, clean milk producer surely does.

"Fairfield Farms Dairy is one of the largest dairies in Baltimore although one of the younger. Its growth has been remarkable. It has endeavored to keep in mind the interests of all parties with whom it does business—producer and consumer and employees alike—and hopes to ever merit the confidence and cooperation of all whose interests it serves."

Statement to Milk Producers

Baltimore Market a Progressive Market

The Baltimore Milk Market has, for the past two years received practically all of its milk from inspected herds, free from tuberculosis, and with other restrictions that have meant some expense and extra trouble to the producer but all of these things have added more interest and satisfaction in the minds of the producer by the fact that he knows he is producing a clean, wholesome grade of milk and he has, at the same time, provided a supply that does not come in competition with the old careless methods of handling milk. The price paid the Baltimore producers for this milk sold to the consumer is the equal of that paid in any of the large cities in the East for commercial milk and more than in most markets.

Cream Supply Needed

Recently the Health Department of Baltimore City put the requirements of milk to be used for cream on the same basis as the milk sold to the housewife as fluid milk. There is not enough milk to supply this cream on the present milk shed and Fairfield Farms Dairy is going out to new markets to secure it and we selected Gettysburg as a point for one of our standard plants. We believe the advantage of this new station will be mutual, that is the Producers in Gettysburg territory will be given an opportunity to get a better market and we hope, in time, to benefit by it too. For some time to come, however, the receipts will not be sufficient to net us anything like the expense involved.

Outlining Our Interests

We believe the Gettysburg territory needs more dairy cattle if its soil is to be normally productive. There is much land available and suitable for milk production. It has been in a milk manufacturing district and there will always be milk here for that purpose. The real milk market, however, and the one rapidly coming to the front, is calling for milk produced from tuberculin-tested cows. Baltimore is fortunate in being well in the lead in this respect. Dozens of large cities are adding this to their requirements each year. This cuts down the market for shipments of other milk and thus makes a poorer market for the untested milk.

Reasons For Testing

The consumers are insisting that they get milk only from tested cows, but we have always felt that the man who owns the cows should be the first to want his cows tested. If you are going to keep good cows, (and none other pays), you do not want them diseased. A herd of cows with a few infected individuals, will soon be very largely infected and the best ones—the ones putting most of their feed back into the pails instead of on their backs—are the ones most likely to go down. If you have any tuberculosis cows the sooner you find it out the better off you are. If you have none the test will be worth the cost for the satisfaction of knowing it and will make your cows worth more money. When a herd becomes well infected the owner cannot make money fast enough from cows to keep up the depreciation of the herd. The better the cows the better the chance to make a profit and also the more necessary to have them tested.

Local Conditions

From the records at Harrisburg there appears to be between 30 and 40 tested herds in Adams county, and not all of these are in the vicinity of Gettysburg. We want to help in any way we can to get more herds tested in this territory and if any feel that they might be interested in getting their cows tested see our Mr. Dows at the Gettysburg plant and perhaps we can help in some way, through him.

Opened on Monday, August 8th

While there was some delay in getting permits, inspections, etc., these were secured and the plant opened on August 8th. The price paid for milk for August from T. B. tested herds will be the flat price of $2.75 per hundred pounds with 25c additional added for a time, to help you pay for the cost of your first tests. This will make the net price to you $3.00 per hundred. We solicit your cooperation and patronage.

CHILLON CASTLE TO BE RESTORED

Place Made Famous by Lord Byron Will be Made Historical Monument.

Montreux, Switzerland.—(AP)—American visitors are legion in contributing to the fund for the repair and restoration of the Castle of Chillon, one of the most famous as well as the most beautiful of Europe's historical monuments.

The castle embodies a struggle of liberty against tyranny. Byron perpetuated it in his poem "The Prisoner of Chillon."

Located on a small rock islet near the Swiss shore of Lake Leman, the castle was the scene of revolting cruelties. Among the unfortunate who suffered calvary were the Jews of Villeneuve, who were accused in 1348 of having poisoned the water of the lake and of having thus introduced "the Black Death."

Jews, men, women and children, were burned alive in the fortress, as well as some Christians, who were accused of complicity. Towards the end of the 16th and 17th centuries a large number of so-called sorcerers were incarcerated, tortured and finally put to death.

Tombs unearthed near the entrance of the castle are said to show that human beings dwelt at Chillon in the bronze age, between the 18th and 19th centuries B. C. But the oldest authenticated historical document bears the date of 1005 A. D. and indicates that the castle belonged at that time to the Bishop of Sion. Eventually the castle passed into the possession of the House of Savoy, whose duke, Charles the Third, was the persecutor of Francois Bonivard, whose imprisonment inspired Byron's poem.

Byron visited Chillon in 1816 and cut his name in the stone pillar to which Bonivard had so long been manacled. Dickens and other notables also have chiselled their names into the stone of the dungeon and today the castle is visited by thousands of Americans.

Writer Sees Decline In French Aviation

Paris (AP)—French aviation is in a state of decline, writes J. M. Amiot, basing his assertion on interviews he says he had with the principal technical men here.

The trouble, he adds, is that French aircraft is "brilliant the first few days but lacking in permanent worth." He gives the life of most French planes as under 100 hours of flying while American and German airplanes are good for 1,000 hours. As proof of this discouraging statement he says statistics show French planes last year were replaced 1 1/2 times. The army, he comments, offers no objection to this policy because the pilots like new planes and the builders like the business.

Amiot considers French pilots superior in ability and training to all others, but says that the government spurns new ideas and does nothing to encourage the development of solid, durable, reliable flying machines. Amiot is one of a number of writers who recently have bemoaned what they consider the aviation engineering stagnation in France, brought out vividly, they say, by the success of American transatlantic fliers and the failure of most French attempts at records of late.

A Light Coat for Cool Days

Lucy has just been to Sunday School where she was deeply distressed to hear about the poor little heather children who have no clothes to wear. Lucy thinks that having no pretty coats and frocks is enough to make any one heatherish. Her own smart broadcloth coat matches beautifully with her hat of crepe de Chine or velvet, and it is lined with crepe de Chine to match her frock. It is a chic coat indeed, made in the double breasted manner with saddle shoulders, shawl collar and two patch pockets. Braid, or narrow fur, trims coat and hat alike, while a small boutonniere on the left shoulder adds a sophisticated touch. Cashmere, velvet, even, twill and flannel are other good materials for this style.

Sudan Grass, Adopted Hay And Forage Crop, Has Imposing Record

Washington.—(AP)—Sudan grass, centuries old at the headwaters of the Nile, is becoming an important forage and emergency hay crop in the United States corn belt.

Federal agronomists, viewing its rapid rise to eminence in the Middle West, place last year's seeding well above 2,000,000 acres.

"There is no other record to equal it in the history of foreign plant introduction," they say. "In 18 years Sudan grass has grown from an eight-ounce packet of unknown African seed to a $16,000,000 American farm crop."

The package from Khartum, unsuspected of extraordinary significance, reached the Department of Agriculture March 16, 1909. Apparently an off-color cousin of Johnson grass, disliked for its massive root system, the seed was sent to an experimental farm at Chillicothe, Texas. There grew from it a new plant, tall, slender and succulent, not unlike Johnson grass except that it had no prodigious rootstocks.

Farmers of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas tried growing it as a forage for livestock. Success was immediate and phenomenal, and today Sudan grass is known to almost every part of the country.

Because of untimely frosts and the cold growing season, the plant does poorly at extremely high altitudes. Wet, sleepy soil, too, is disastrous. "Red spot," or sorghum blight, is a chief parasitic enemy. Otherwise, Sudan grass is a sturdy crop from a seven-inch forage 13 days after planting, on up through the hay stage 42 to 56 days old, to a five or six-foot maturity within 71 days.

Neither a perennial, legume, nor soil improver, Sudan grass cannot be introduced successfully into any crop rotation.

"In certain southern states," authorities say, "it may be used like corn or wheat of our northern states as one of the money crops. Its chief value is in its quick growth as an emergency hay crop when alfalfa, clover or timothy runs short, as summer pasture in the dairy sections, and as an annual forage crop in the Great Plains."

When you need printing that is "turned out on time and guaranteed to please" bring the job to The Gettysburg Times office.

Save yourself this bother

ALWAYS watching your crankcase—always fearing you'll run out of oil... Is this one of your motoring worries? Here's a way to kill it:

Use the newly perfected Atlantic Motor Oil—"Heavy" for summer—and you'll stop evaporation. It is evaporation which, with ordinary oils, is chiefly responsible for excessive oil consumption.

Atlantic "Heavy" will not thin down or evaporate under high motor heat and torrid summer temperatures. An Atlantic improvement—one of the greatest in the industry; and one which automotive engineers have long felt possible.

Atlantic "Heavy" is correct summer grade for most cars and trucks. Get a filling. Then watch your oil mileage shoot upward and oil expense downward.

One-gallon, five-gallon and one-quart cans, and in bulk—at all Atlantic dealers and service stations.

Evaporation tests prove the remarkable quality of this oil

At 760° Fahrenheit (more than three and one-half times the temperature of boiling water) Atlantic "Heavy," under repeated tests, showed an evaporation loss of less than 1%.

Twelve other representative "heavy" oils, under identically the same tests, showed evaporation losses ranging up to 42%.

French Drink Less Wine
Official Figures Show

Paris.—(AP)—It appears that one Frenchman in ten is going dry in defense of his pocketbook. Or it may be that they all are watering their wine.

Official statistics show that from 10 to 20 per cent less wine has been drunk in France in the last six months than in corresponding periods in the past.

Every man, woman and child, nevertheless, has had an average of 20 gallons, in six months. Twenty per cent less wine has been taken out of warehouses than last year. Taxes paid on wine supposedly consumed indicated that ten per cent less than usual has been sold over the counter.

"IRISH HEARTS," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila Kildare and her father emigrate to America to follow Emmett Murtough, to whom she is betrothed. Neither Kildare nor Murtough hold steady jobs and Sheila works as a waitress. Her only friends are the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer, whose kindness interests her. Murtough joins a band of bootleggers and, influenced by a cabaret girl, reveals a plan to move $150,000 worth of contraband. He enlists with the rivals to betray the hiding place.

"Listen, I understand, from what we have learned about you, that you and this little girl are good friends—in fact, you'd both like to get married and get a good start in a business worth while. Well, here's your chance. Do this one job and you've got the money to marry and to settle down in a legitimate business. It's a chance not many fellows get in this game," he added. "How about it?"

"And if you don't want to play that way, we'll turn you up to Clocquer within an hour," Murtough did not realize that if they did, it would tip off their own plans. He sat dumbly for several minutes, then threw out his hands and said: "All right. You win and I'll play square with you; but it's the first crooked deal I ever put over."

They decided that Murtough had better sleep in the apartment there until time to get up and drive to the Long Island rendezvous. Another inner bedroom connected with that occupied by Schermer, and Murtough was assigned to that. There was no door leading to the hall and the window was seven stories above the street. Murtough sat himself down to reflections on the gift of eternal silence.

"You and Emmett Murtough engaged?"

CHAPTER XI

Planning the "Double-Cross"

Sheila had not seen Rory O'Shea since his victory over Campeau at the Garden. She had avoided Mrs. O'Shea, too, because she felt that she might be embarrassed if she visited Rory's mother, and he were to be home when she called. She felt instinctively that Rory admired her even though she had not heard from him directly during his stay at the training camp. Memory of the long automobile ride brought back many pleasant recollections of this becoming young man, but now that she had given her word definitely to Emmett Murtough she felt she must put such thoughts from her.

Rory had called at the Kildare apartment one night but Sheila was not at home and Old Tom did not encourage him to stay until she returned from her work at the restaurant. Rory had settled his affairs with Jack Reagan and had in his wallet a check for $1,750 more than he had expected. It was eight o'clock and he decided to have supper at Nick's. He selected a table, which he thought would be served by Sheila, so that he might chat with her. He lingered over his meal in order to get a word with her now and then, and when Sheila brought her own supper he beckoned to her to lay it at his table.

"I've missed you, Miss Kildare, these two months," he said. "Ah, ye' had no time to think of me, what with all the training ye had to do," she replied with a smile.

"It was thinking of you that heeded me to get into shape to win. I thought a lot about you while I was away. I didn't know you had gone to work and that Old Tom had quit Tim. I'm sorry for that."

"The work didn't suit my father," she said in defense of him. "Work of any kind that is honest ought not to hurt anybody," retorted Rory.

"I didn't say it hurt him."

"Well, it ought to suit him then."

Truth to tell, Rory had seen through Old Tom and his mighty pretensions. "It's a shame you have to be doing this."

"Any kind of work that's honest ought to suit anybody," she replied, paraphrasing his own words. "But not for a girl like you."

"Oh, it's been all right. Nick's not so bad to work for, after ye know yer job."

"I just settled for the fight and it's a right good nest egg I've got left, more than I expected out of it. Reagan is a fair manager all right."

"And will ye be keeping up yer fighting? Yer mother says she'd like to have you quit."

"Oh, mother's been saying that all these years, but she wants me to do what is best. I don't know yet," he went on seriously. "I stood up well in the fight with Campeau, but these young fellows have got something that I lost when I was a kid at the game. I've about come to the conclusion that I'm through."

"An' ye'll not fight any more? Oh, that would be grand!"

"Would ye care, Sheila?"

"Of course, I'd care. Why, I think it would be wonderful if you could get into business yerself or with yer brother, Tim, just like ye talked that day."

"You remember then our ride? I wondered if you did. I was very happy that day."

"It was beautiful, the sunset an' all," mused Sheila.

"I'd like to take you again, some time. And, how about the West End Club's big shindig, the dance, I mean. Will you go with me?" he asked, his eyes bright with anticipation. "We'll have a great time."

"I'm sorry but I've already promised Emmett."

"Oh," and the lilt in Rory's voice failed.

"You see, he asked me some time ago."

"But I couldn't. I was away."

"An' I told him yes. Will you be coming?"

"Oh, I always take Mother and Dad. They know all the old timers, the real old timers, you know, and it gives them a chance to meet them again. They wouldn't miss it for anything."

"Then I'll see you."

"And will you dance with me?"

"Of course, I will."

After Sheila had finished they walked slowly homeward and went down as far as the new steamship docks, where they could see the lights on an ocean going vessel that was moored there waiting to sail on the next day. The New Jersey shore was alive with the glimmering lights of automobiles and trolley cars.

"There's some mighty nice flats a bit farther north there," remarked Rory. "I know some friends who live over there. Once I wanted the folks to move over there, but they like the neighborhood they've been living in. The rents are nearly as cheap as here and the streets are clean and there are trees and grass on the lawns in front of the smaller houses. It's nice for young couples just starting out."

"It would be nice for Emmett an' me then, wouldn't it? Emmett's so changed now an' he says he has a fine chance."

"You and Emmett Murtough engaged?"

"Well, we had planned it a long, long time ago, and when he changed for the better I agreed."

Rory said no more on the way home and his silence embarrassed Sheila into silence also. At the door where they parted Rory said:

"Well, I'll see you at the dance."

"Oh, of course. Give my love to yer mother."

Sheila turned up the stairs, but it seemed to Rory, who listened to her footfalls, that her feet must have turned to lead.

At the West End Club there was much talk and planning of the coming dance. All the active workers of the district had been enlisted to do their share to make it a huge success. Clocquer took advantage of the fact that most of his men were there to call them into meeting, and he told them of his plans to transport the entire shipload of contraband on the following Sunday night. Enough trucks would be furnished to do the job and he appointed Dixon in charge and Devlin first lieutenant in the enterprise. It was their business to learn how many vehicles would be required, to obtain the services of drivers and guards and to schedule the routes over which each truck should speed to New York.

"I'll take Murtough with me if it's all right," said Devlin. "He appears to be a pretty handy fellow."

"He stood up all right in that trouble we had with Stevens," commented Dixon. "I think he's a good man."

"I'll speak to him then; he ought to be in later."
